We may no longer claim the Utah and Northera, though the territorial interest in it entitles Utah to look with a surt of fatherly pride upon its rapid progress. While 1880 has been distinguished by its increased railroad mileage, 1881 will probably lead the present year. Roads are in contemplation and course of construction allower the west, and if the prosents which reasons are substituted at the judgment, of which they cannot exactly comprehend the motives

Robinson Accidentally tinue a railroad-building boom may be expected with the opening of spring, and if Utah has done her share in the great industry this year she is more than likely to keep up with the aga in the future. In all probability the standard-gauge to be constructed by the Union Pacific from Ogden to the Columbia River will be begun and the cars running beyond the territorial borders before the close of the season. The Uran Eastern, it is confidently expected, will build the twenty or twenty-five miles between its present terminus and this city. There is also a pretty well defined rumor of the extension, next between its present terminus and this city. There is also a pretty well defined rumur of the extension, next year, of the Utah Western. And now another most important enterprise in the way of railroading is announced. washington, 22.—President Hayes has received and accepted the resignation of Judge Charles Silent, associate justice of the supreme court of Arizona territory. The cause assigned by Judge Silent for his resignation is ill health. A nomination to fill the vacancy will be sent to the Senate coon after Chapress as-embles. Applications for appointment as his successor are already on file at the department of the lower Serier; and if the Marse vale mines shall prove as rich as they now promise there will be need of a railroad to them, as much as did the Horn Silver want one. But this southeastern line presents a spark of bops to be found in no other direction. There are at least three railroads moving westward, all of which must come into or cut very close to Utah, and if they or either of them are met by any of the territorial roads now in operation, in course of construction or in prospective, the proposed line will probably be that one, as a glance at the map will readily show. It can hardly be that all the roads crossing the continent will dedge Utah. At least we all heartly hope they will not, for every year makes it plainer to everybody that a second rail ontiet is saily needed.

Utah is being pretty well crossed and opened by railroads but she cannot have too many of them. They are the great aids to development, and whether they are monopolies or otherwise, they always help more than they hurt a country. Let us have more of them, and in every direction, and particularly let us have those that premise to remedy any evil that may exist, or give hope of creating other means than those alroady in existence for doing or dividing the carrying trade to and from the territory.
